§ WHY BJAk

Bjak started with insurance and is now widening the surface into payments, savings, investing and travel, exactly the kind of multi-product fintech platform where user-journey complexity compounds fast and shallow PMs get stuck. The posting is explicit that this role is for builders who work deeply with engineering, not people who write decks; that matches how I have always worked. What caught my attention specifically is the framing around turning complex financial products into simple, usable customer journeys: that is the sentence that describes what I shipped at EMIL Group, cutting insurance product time-to-market from months to under a week, and at Kvitt, taken from zero to acquisition inside the girocard ecosystem. That is the kind of execution Bjak is describing, and I have done it more than once.

§ SIDE PROJECT

CONSTRUCT8 GITHUB.COM/HILBERTP →

Two-sided B2B marketplace for construction staffing, built alone from zero.

- Anonymity-until-payment model that protects both firms and workers until commitment is made.
 - WhatsApp and Telegram as the primary product surface, keeping acquisition cost near zero.
 - LLM agents across the funnel so one person runs the full day-to-day operation.
 - Demonstrates the zero-to-one, high-ownership, fast-iteration mindset Bjak is hiring for.

§ HOW I WOULD WORK AT BJAК

First weeks, concrete.

WEEK 1

Listen, map, find the gaps.

Sit alongside the insurance and payments teams, read every live incident and support ticket I can access, and map the current user journeys end-to-end to find where the biggest drop-off or compliance friction sits.

WEEK 2

Slice, scope, align.

Take the one or two highest-impact gaps from week one, write crisp user stories with acceptance criteria, align with engineering on feasibility and compliance on risk, and get the first iteration scoped.

WEEK 3+

Ship, measure, iterate.

Get the first feature into users' hands, instrument the key metrics, run a short retrospective on what changed, and feed the learning back into the roadmap before the next sprint starts.

I COVER LETTER

Dear Bjak Hiring Team,

I am writing to apply for the Product Owner, Technical, AI Finance role. I have spent thirteen years shipping financial products in regulated environments, P2P payments taken to acquisition by Sparkasse, an insurance B2B SaaS platform at EMIL Group, a public-sector analytics platform, and defence AI infrastructure, and the Bjak posting describes the way I already work: start from user problems, cut complexity, ship fast, and keep caring after launch.

At Kvitt Payment Solutions I built a mobile group P2P payments product from zero and took it to acquisition, ending up operating inside the girocard ecosystem. That required navigating payment regulation, designing edge-case-heavy user flows, and making product decisions with incomplete data because there was no prior product to learn from. At EMIL Group I inherited an eighteen-person delivery organisation losing senior engineers and client trust, restructured it into three focused teams, shipped the Claims Center from concept to production, and cut the time to launch a new insurance product from months to under a week. Those two experiences, one founding-stage, one rescue, cover most of the scenarios a fast-moving fintech platform will put in front of a PM.

I understand the infrastructure that makes fintech products work at scale. I have owned Kubernetes-based platform delivery, ETL pipelines for regulated data, GitOps rollout that reduced deployment time from days to thirty minutes, and compliance-adjacent work as Deputy IT Security Officer. That means I can work deeply with engineering, read the stack, and make trade-offs between speed, user experience, and operational risk without hiding behind a requirements document.

On the AI side, I use Claude Code, GitHub Copilot, Cursor, Lovable and n8n daily, not as productivity theatre but as actual delivery tools. I built a two-sided marketplace alone, running LLM agents across the funnel. I am genuinely interested in the AI Finance space because the hardest problem is not adding an LLM to a flow: it is designing the human-in-the-loop checkpoints that keep a regulated financial product trustworthy. That design problem sits exactly at the intersection of product sense and technical depth.

Bjak is based in Southeast Asia and I am in Berlin; I have worked in fully remote, multinational teams across European defence programmes and know what it takes to build trust asynchronously. I move fast on assessments and interviews and am available at four weeks' notice.

Best regards, Philipp Hilbert
