

Philipp Hilbert. Senior Product Manager, consumer payments.

Positioning, 13 years shipping regulated products in payments, insurance, and public sector, now focused on the consumer wallet space Wero is building.

BERLIN, GERMANY · HILBERT@TRUE-NORTH.BERLIN · TRUE-NORTH.BERLIN

LinkedIn · GitHub · www.true-north.berlin · YouTube (EN sample)

Dear EPI Company team,

Payments is a domain I have worked in from two directions. At Kvitt Payment Solutions I built a mobile P2P group-payments product from zero, ran it inside the girocard ecosystem, and took it to acquisition by Sparkasse. That gave me a close view of consumer payment behaviour, onboarding friction, and the regulatory constraints that shape what you can and cannot ship. More recently I have led product for a healthcare mobile app at CLINET where I cut a failing roadmap down to the 10% of features that actually mattered for user activation, and user acceptance rose more than fivefold as a result.

Wero's challenge, getting users across Europe from install to habitual use of a new digital wallet, is the problem I want to work on. The onboarding, activation, engagement, and retention focus you describe in the posting is the exact scope I gravitate toward, and the data-driven angle matches how I work: I instrument competing workflows before picking one, and I treat conversion and funnel metrics as first-class product signals.

The fintech and payments domain knowledge you list as a plus is one I have both from the founder side (Kvitt) and from working alongside compliance and security teams in regulated environments at the Federal Employment Agency and Bundesdruckerei. I understand that external stakeholders, in your case the 16 member banks, have hard constraints that the product roadmap has to absorb, and I have managed exactly that kind of multi-stakeholder alignment at Rohde & Schwarz across multinational FCAS programme partners.

I am an EU citizen based in Berlin, fluent in English and German, and comfortable in a fully remote Pan-European team. I can be available within four weeks of an offer.

Best regards, Philipp Hilbert
